My query is, I don't find any polygon type input, so I was wondering if there is a way to input a shapefile with a list of polygons, as one would do in mysql, so the data can be automatically loaded in a table in the DB. Another little question, how to continue if I find a node? The best approach should be to create the network from a route, so I can generate paths and or my routes (more like an optimization). But how to create a path out of all the nodes created by my network? I hope my confusion is clear. A: For a shapefile the solution is provided by the construct_raster_grid function. This function takes as input an OGR, PostGIS and GDAL vector data source layer in the shapefile format. The input vector data source layer is suitable if you need to load data from a shapefile into a PostGIS table and subsequently use the data in a postgis view. The used vector data source layer can be the following SQL: SELECT AsText(ST_AsBinary(geom)) as wkb FROM dbname The result is a simple text with the data representation of the WKB of the geometry part of the layer. In this result one can see that the path is not included. A spatial relationship between the geometry (shapefile) and its path in PostGIS is no direct feature and f678ea9f9e
