Apple Buys Wireless Microphone Company Shure, Adds Cloud-based Management Services Apple has announced it has acquired the leading company in wireless microphone technology. The news was first confirmed by Reuters, who said Apple had acquired Shure for a purchase price of $390 million. Apple has been looking to expand its presence in the wireless microphone technology space, particularly in the professional realm. AppleInsider previously reported that it has also been developing its own wireless mics, a move it could make in preparation for offering its users the ability to make calls or use FaceTime through the device. With this acquisition, it appears Apple wants to cement its position as a leader in this space. At a recent conference, the company execs were quick to tout the benefits of Shure technology, telling attendees that “If you were to build the iPhone today, you wouldn’t be able to do it without a Shure.” Apple told Reuters that it plans to integrate Shure’s services into its own over time. “By acquiring Shure, we can add to Apple’s extraordinary wireless device lineup with a product that is so easy to use. Shure’s high-performance audio products are ideal for all iOS devices,” said

Flash and Download Custom ROM or Stock ROM Firmware ROMPages Monday, April 25, 2016 Lettuce Plant, part 2 Hey everyone! So much has happened over the past few months, so in the next few days I'm going to be posting pictures and details about the new house and all the stuff we've done since I last posted in February. But first, it's time for the conclusion to my plant plan. I started the planting a week after posting the plans for the house. It's hard to believe it's been a week, but I just want to do these photos justice and they're not taking the full effect of my dirty little studio. So here we go, finally! I'll be sure to post photos of the house in the coming days too, since it's pretty exciting to see how everything is coming together! First up, my lettuce plant in the sitting room, which hasn't really changed much at all since last week. I decided I didn't want to have to add plants to the floor, so I've gone with this plan to have the leaves on a raised planter at the base of the window. It's an old planter that I got at a thrift store, and I love it! I want to use it for my potted planter plants as well! I tried growing basil, oregano, and thyme in pots last year (it didn't really work out the way I wanted) but I plan to try again this year. I'll try to keep you posted on how it goes! Also in this plan, I'm planting another batch of lettuce, this time in the dining room. I don't know how many will grow, but I'll keep adding plants until it's too messy to eat. But I'm OK with that. Above, you can see the little planters I made for the plants, and they're lined up together nicely. The pots were easy to cut out, but be sure to mark the marked lines on the bottom of the pots with a pencil so you don't scratch them. I used water-based vinyl cement for this project, which worked really well! Above, I
