Chromatin structure

DNA exists in the condensed, chromatin form to fit into the nucleus. DNA loops twice around a histone octamer to form a nucleosome ("beads on a string"). H1 binds to the nucleosome and to "linker DNA," thereby stabilizing the chromatin fiber. Phosphate groups give DNA a \ominus charge. Lysine and arginine give histones a \oplus charge. In mitosis, DNA condenses to form chromosomes. DNA and histone synthesis occurs during S phase. Mitochondria have their own DNA, which is circular and does not utilize histones.

Heterochromatin

Condensed, appears darker on EM (labeled H in [A]; Nu, nucleolus). Transcriptionally inactive, sterically inaccessible. ↑ methylation, ↓ acetylation.

Heterochromatin = Highly Condensed. Barr bodies (inactive X chromosomes) may be visible on the periphery of nucleus.

Euchromatin

Less condensed, appears lighter on EM (labeled E in [A]). Transcriptionally active, sterically accessible.

Eu = true, "truly transcribed." Euchromatin is Expressed.

DNA methylation

Changes the expression of a DNA segment without changing the sequence. Involved with genomic imprinting, X-chromosome

DNA is methylated in imprinting. Methylation within gene promoter (CpG islands) typically represses gene transcription.
